Join arts and health professionals, students and community members in conversation at the intersection(s) of trauma-informed practice and community-engaged art. Hear from Philadelphia arts organizations using trauma-informed approaches to promote wellness in various communities, where healing, protection and growth necessitate understanding individual and historic contexts of adversity, trauma and toxic stress. Learn more about trauma theory from health professionals, and discuss how practitioners from different disciplines can cooperate and collaborate to support resilience and recovery from trauma through the arts. This event is free and open to the public.
